John Hey, have you decided where you want to go this summer?

Eric What, you mean summer camp?

John Yeah, because I've found this new one, and it looks really good. Here, check out this leaflet.

Eric Let me see. Art Camp... Looks good.

John There are lots of activities. Painting, drawing, computer graphics...

Eric Yeah, but there's no photography. That's what I'm interested in.

John Yes, there is. It's on Sunday. You can choose that or comic making.

Eric Well, I'd choose photography for sure.

John I knew you'd like that. And check this out, you can also make your own photo album!

Eric Oh, yeah. On Tuesday. This camp looks perfect for me.

John Me too. I really want to learn some pottery. And at the end of the week, there's a big exhibition with the art you've made.

Eric Great! How much does it cost?

John It's 175 euros for the week.

Eric That's not bad. Where do you stay? Do they have rooms or something?

John It's not that kind of camp. You stay there all day long but you go home in the evening.

Eric So there's no accommodation. That's OK.

John Well, what do you think?

Eric Let's go for it.

There is a growing body of research that suggests that the use of a structured approach to the selection of a research topic can lead to a more focused and effective research project. This approach involves identifying a specific research question, developing a research plan, and then conducting the research in a systematic and organized manner. By following this approach, researchers can ensure that their research is well-structured and that they are able to answer their research question effectively.
